PUBLICATIONS.

"Frank Nelson in the Forecastle, or the Sportsman's Club Among the Whales." Porter & Coates, publishers, Philadelphia.

Books designed especially for young people of either sex have, for a generation past, been regarded as a necessary branch of our current literature. Numerous authors have entered this particular field, and the few only having met the popular demand for works of this description have been richly rewarded.

Among these writers none have achieved greater or probably better deserved success than the author of the above work, who is known to the world under the nom de plume of "Harry Castleman." It is a continuation of the "Frank Nelson" or "Sportsman's Club" series, the preceding volumes of which have wrought such a universal appeal upon the youthful mind. They relate scenes and incidents that are ever most delightful to the young imagination, and, and, at the same time, contain profitable information relative to the geographical and other characteristics of various countries, and the manners and customs of their inhabitants, etc., besides exerting a wholesome moral influence. This volume carries the hero through the stirring adventures of a whaling cruise, and the reader is likewise highly entertained in the graphic description of what life in the different phases and visits to a number of ports in the Pacific. It has also many handsome and appropriate illustrations. As a Christmas present it is just what most boys would best appreciate. For sale by Robert Clarke & Co., Cincinnati, who will send it by mail prepaid on the receipt of the price, $1.25.

LITTEL'S LIVING AGE FOR 1877.

The continued and increasing success of this periodical (now over thirty-three years old) is doubtless owing to the fact, more generally recognized every year, that it affords the most comprehensive and, at the same time, the cheapest means of keeping well informed in the best literature of the day. With its weekly issue, and its three and a quarter thousand large pages of reading matter, it is enabled to present with a freshness and satisfactory completeness attempted by no other publication, the ablest essays and reviews, the choicest serial and short stories, the most interesting sketches of travel and discovery, the best poetry, and the most valuable biographical, historical, scientific and political information from the entire world of foreign periodical literature.

In its pages are represented such eminent authors as Prof. Max Muller, Prof. Tyndall, Dr. Huxley, W. E. Gladstone, Dr. W. B. Carpenter, Prof. Huxley, R. C. Proctor, Frances Power Cobbe, the Duke of Argyll, J. A. Froude, Mrs. Alcock, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Tuckwell, Jean Ingelow, George MacDonald, Wm. Black, Matthew Arnold, Henry Kingsley, W. W. Story, Auerbach, Ruskin, Carlyle, Tennyson, Browning, and many other leaders in science, fiction, history, biography, philosophy, poetry, travel, politics, criticism and art.

It is, in short, a thorough compilation of an indispensable current literature—indispensable because it embraces the work of the foremost writers upon all topics of living interest; and as such importance and convenience to every American reader can hardly be overestimated. It has always ranked as chief among the periodicals giving an amount of reading unapproached by any other magazine; it has absorbed its competitor. Every Saturday, and in the multiplicity of periodicals it can hardly be discussed with by any person or family desiring a satisfactory compendium of whatever is of immediate interest or permanent value in the literary world.

The subscription price ($5 a year) is cheap for the amount of reading furnished, and for those desiring the cream of both home and foreign literature, the publishers make a still cheaper offer, viz.: to send, post-paid, The Living Age and either one of the American $4 monthlies, or weeklies, a year for $10.50. With The Living Age and one of our other leading American monthlies, a subscriber will, at small cost, be put in "command of the whole situation."

An extra offer, also, is made to all new subscribers for 1877, viz.: to send them gratis the six numbers of 1876, containing, besides other valuable reading, the first installments of a new and unusually powerful serial story by George MacDonald, now appearing in The Living Age from advance sheets.

The volume begins Jan. 1st, and we recommend the periodical to the attention of our readers. We know of no other way in which so much of the best work of the best minds of the time can be obtained so cheaply and conveniently as through this standard weekly magazine. Published by Little & Gay, Boston.

"A Point of Honor," by Mrs. Anne Edwards. Shuman & Co., New York, Publishers.

Mrs. Edwards has during six or seven years past produced a number of works that have held, and will no doubt long continue to hold, a firm grasp upon the public estimation, both here and in England.

She has not, certainly, that grandeur of thought and elegance of diction that make George Eliot, for instance, pre-eminent of her sex in this department of literature. Such, of course, is not to be expected; but her writings may be said to occupy a position which is a happy medium between the standard and the sensational novel of the present day.

It is this class of fiction, probably, that will yield enjoyment to the greatest number of readers. There is much in them that claims the admiration of the learned and thoughtful, and at the same time giving abundant entertainment to the more volatile and less exacting of those who choose to select their reading wholly or partly from their mental pabulum. In this, her latest effort, the authoress displays those fine qualities which have secured for several of her previous works, "Leah, a Woman of Fashion," "Ought We to Visit Her," "Steven Lawrence, Yeoman," and others, the popular approval and the consequent extensive circulation. The style is concise and pleasing, the plot simple and natural, and the scenes and incidents are depicted with a realistic vigor that often impart to them a true dramatic interest. We predict for it an increased popularity and a rapid sale. It can be had of the publishers, post-paid, $1 in paper, or $1.50 in cloth.
